

Ans.

BOOKS ARE OUR TRUE FRIENDS

Books written by master-minds provide us incomparable and invincible enlightenment in varied spheres of life. There is a vast scope of learning, getting wisdom and making innovations in life. Being our most faithful and justified friends, they never desert us but rather pave our path for perennial upliftment and betterment. They generate life in our dry mind and smoothen the thorny path of complexities. At one time all our friends and relatives may break bonds with us but books never side from us. They amuse, entertain, encourage, incite and excite us to free from the darkest period.

Books contain the best thought and experiences of the noblest minds that ever dwelt on the earth. They are the storehouse of knowledge, wisdom and perseverance. They give us a glimpse of the divergent cultures, traditions and rituals. When we are in pensive mood, we must seek the company of books. Thus the books are our best source of providing health, happiness and hygiene in our monotonous life.

With your school education, you have come across

IMPORTANCE OF NEWSPAPERS

By Shalini of X-B

“Newspapers are the veins of a nation”.

The newspapers, magazines and media play a very crucial role in the life and working of a nation. Their significance is of paramount importance. Various happenings going on round the world find a suitable place in the columns of the newspapers. From politician, higher ups educationists, students, businessmen or to the labour class etc., all find topics of their interest in the paper. Millions of copies of hundreds of newspaper in English and other Indian languages are published everyday and millions of the readers grab them for their headlines, stories, stock and commodity prices, job opportunities and entertainments. It is the safest and the sound method of jotting the most relevant information on varied types of issues. These are the path-finders both for the public and the government as these present the policies, programmes and criticism of the government. They offer spacious columns for public opinions. They represent public as well as the outside world of varied happenings.

The newspapers are cheap and provide us multiple information. They can be taken anywhere very easily and one can read what he likes. In addition to this, they can be preserved for record. Constant reading develops a practice of reading. Though we have computers and televisions at our hand, but the importance of the newspapers will always remain perennial.

“If I Were a Millionaire” Take hints from the